(The Legend of the Gate Keeper #4)

Eric pulled a dagger from inside his shirt and sat down on the platform with his feet hanging off the edge. Holding the point to his neck, he said, "Since you seem to be so sure I'm the cause of all your pain, I will give you one chance to seek the revenge you lust for." He smiled at the man. "I give you my word, I will not move. Come now, do your people a service and obtain the blood you seek." The man just lowered his head, unable to say a word through his trembling lips.

Eric looked to the old woman holding the baby. He raised his head, still holding the dagger point to his throat, then pushed it in deeper as a trickle of blood ran from the small cut. "You say you lost your family, that your grandchild will never be able lead a normal life. I'm truly sorry for your loss, and I humbly offer my life in return. Someday you will be able to tell him you singlehandedly smote the evil that took his parents from this world." Eric made a clicking noise with his tongue. "Come now, I promise you it will be easy. All you have to do is push, and justice will be done." He jiggled the handle a couple of times, making the line of blood flow a bit faster. The old woman began to sob, nuzzling her cheek against the infant's stomach.

Has Potential - needs refinement and practice

By D. B. Dean

The Author has a lot of potential as a very enjoyable writer. However, I believe he may have fallen victim to the trap of publishing too soon. I have read Books 1 - 4 of the series. This review is for the first 4 books.

The story line is good and the plot arc moves quickly and keeps the reader engaged. The characters, at times, are complex and dynamic. You identify with them quickly and come to care about them. This has all of the basic ingredients for a good story.

The weakness is found in the writing technique, which can only be corrected by extensive red line sessions. The grammar is often poor. Some of the phrases are repetitive. The writer spends a lot of his words "telling" about a scene rather than "showing" me the scene. Often a scene seems to be thrown in because the writer felt like writing it, even if it doesn't really help move the story line along. While I am one who loves a descriptive scene that helps me see, smell and hear the nature around the character, starting the book with several pages of it is a rookie mistake.

In summary, I read books 1-4 because I enjoyed the plot line and characters. But I was frustrated by the poor technique, the "telling" writing style and the over use of basic ideas that were repetitive in nature. Regardless, I will read the rest of the series because I find the characters engaging enough to overlook the writing flaws.

The series just keeps getting better

By Marie2662

Once again Jeff Gunzel has managed to write a story that satisfies but leaves you waiting for the next installment. The characters have grown more in their skills and what their part will be in saving the world. Jeff has created some interesting twists in the whole evil corruption strain. The psychology behind Eric's nemesis is not very subtle but something we see frequently when there is too much power given to one person.

There are a couple of typos but, again, they are not enough to detract from the story. Yes - I recommend reading Book #4.

Too dang short but still worth it

By Frank

Everyone is into cliff hangers. I can't stand it. I want to read a complete tale but have to wait....and wait...and wait some more. I suffer from instant gratification-ism. I just hope Jeff doesn't wait/take too long for #5. GRRM has taken so long I no longer wish for the next installment of the King of Thrones epic. I could care less and don't want this to happen to the Gate Keeper tale. Common Jeff! Put the remote down and get-er-done!
