A Profound Study of Arthurian Mysteries

By JAY BREMYER

Seddon, as noted in the author's note, studied moral sciences with Bertrand Russell at Cambridge, and is obviously a disciplined and deeply informed scholar. He very much impresses me in the depth of his knowledge of the Celtic and Northern Myths as well as initiation science and the work of Rudolf Steiner. This book beautifully presents the geography, archaeology, and stories of Cornwall, illuminating profound issues of the creative imagination. It excited me to go back to my own work on Arthurian mythology.
